The thing that worked well for this assignment was the recursion factor of the data structure. It made the code a lot more smoother to write but kind of confusing to understand honestly.

The thing that didn't work well for this project was actually the same of what went well for the assignment. It was a little hard to follow where the recursion was, but once I got the hang of it, it was pretty straight forward to understand.

I needed help understanding where the recursion was and how to implement it. Like I said, it was pretty straight forward once I got the hang of it and got help for it.

This assignment really enforced the knowledge of recursion. I was a little shakey on it coming out of 202, but this enforced some of the points that I was confused on at first. I would still need a little work with it to be fully comfortable with it.
